CARNIVAL FINANCIAL SUCCESS.

A Nice Sum Was Realized in Spite of the Dull Times.

PONY AWARD MADE.

Largest Crowd of the Week Was on Saturday Night.

The Carnival given by the Cosmopolitan Co., under the auspices of the U. R. K. P., closed Saturday night with by far the largest crowd of the week. The weather continued fine to the end and the management was much pleased with the finish. The Knights of Pythias came out with a nice little sum to the good.

The pony contest came to a close at nine o'clock and master Alex Fowler was found to be the winner by a large majority. The final figures are given herewith.

SEARCH FOR SMITH.

Now Believed That Missing Student Has Gone West.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 10.—Search for W. E. Smith, missing State University student, has developed into a farce. He is daily found and identified at points hundreds of miles apart. It is now generally believed that he has gone West to his parents, who live in New Mexico, and that he has not written his brother because he is ashamed of having left college as he did. Smith has been in the West long enough before to become thoroughly acquainted with the country and would not likely get lost.

ILL MANY MONTHS.

Death Comes as Relief of Tuberculosis Victim.

Grover Hord, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hord, died Saturday night at the home of his parents, on South Virginia street, after a long illness of tuberculosis. He was in his twentieth year and was a young man who had a host of friends.

About a year ago Mr. Hord accepted a position in Memphis, but on account of declining health he was forced to resign and return home. His condition did not improve and later he went to California, hoping that the climate on the Pacific coast would prove beneficial. He continued to grow worse, however, and in August his father went after him, and he was brought home the latter part of that month. He had been confined to his bed ever since his return and his death was not unexpected.

Dr. M. A. Jenkins held funeral services at the residence yesterday morning at 10 o'clock and the interment took place in Riverside Cemetery.

MR. JARRETT'S BUSY DAY

Called Upon to Sign $61,000 of $5.00 Bills.

President Geo. C. Long, of the First National Bank, is attending a convention of sportsmen out in Oklahoma and Vice-President C. F. Jarrett is acting as President of the Bank. Saturday a new issue of $61,000 in bank notes, most of it in $5 bills, was put into circulation by the bank and Mr. Jarrett was called upon to write his name upon them to make them good. It took something like 12,000 flourishes of his pen to make the "pile of money."

TOBACCO MARKET.

Small Sales of Low Leaf and Lugs.

The local salesman for the Association disposed of 29 hogheads of tobacco last week. Prices were in accordance with the schedule. At the Association saleroom nothing is on hand except lugs and the lower grades of leaf.

The Society of Equity made no report of the business for the past week.

GIVEN FREEDOM

Evidence Insufficient to Warrant an Indictment.

Bob Graves, a negro who was held over to Hopkins county grand jury on charge of attempting to assault a white woman near Mannington some time ago, was released from jail Saturday. The grand jury failed to secure enough evidence to warrant an indictment.

FIRST GAME

Of Football Won By Hopkinsville Over Pembroke

The Hopkinsville High School football team defeated the Pembroke eleven in the game here Friday afternoon, the score being 12 to 0. The game was close and exciting. The patronage was good from both the High School and city people and the local team cleared some money on the game.

GRAND JURY REPORTS.

About Thirty Indictments Returned—One-third For Gaming.

The case of E. H. Pell & Co. vs. The Robinson Amusement Co., for breach of contract at Paducah last year, was begun Saturday and concluded yesterday. The jury gave the plaintiff $200 and costs.

Mrs. Mollie Major, who sued the Illinois Central Railroad Co., got judgment for $150 and costs.

In the case of Wm. Brown vs. the City Light Co. for alleged damages, the plaintiff was ordered to submit to a medical examination Oct. 13 to determine the extent of the injuries claimed from an electric current.

The case of R. A. White's Exr., vs. C. S. Coleman was called yesterday afternoon and trial entered into.

FIRST BATCH.

The grand jury Saturday returned 33 indictments for various offenses. Two were for willful murder against Lee Hickman and Reuben Kendrick, negroes. Ten were for gaming, each indictment being against several persons, mostly colored. Other indictments were, grand larceny 2, shooting into train 1, malicious shooting 2, selling liquor without license 6, breach of peace 2, housebreaking 4, concealed weapons 1, assault and battery 2.

The grand jury is still in session.

BIBLE CONFERENCE

Will Begin Friday—Dr. Jenkins to Lecture To-night.

The Bible Conference at the Baptist church will begin Friday night with Dr. Miller as the first speaker, who will discuss "The Second Coming of Christ" in a series of sermons. Sunday will be Baraca Day, with Dr. Joseph Broughton conducting the service. Dr. Jenkins, pastor of the church, will begin his series of illustrated lectures on his foreign travels this evening at the church. They will continue weekly for about two months. There will be no admission charged, but there will be a voluntary collection box at the door.

VICTIM OF PARALYSIS.

Stroke Proved Fatal After Several Months.

Thomas F. Collins, a well known citizen of the Julien neighborhood, died about noon Sunday, after an illness of several months of paralysis. He never rallied after the stroke, but grew gradually worse until the end came. Mr. Collins was 63 years old and leaves several children. He was engaged in business in this city at one time, but moved to the country several years ago. He was a member of the Methodist church.

The interment took place in the Collins burying ground, near Lafayette, yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. D. Fraser conducted services at the grave.

TEACHERS MEET

And Have a Big Day in the Castleberry District.

Friday was a big day at the school house at Castleberry. The educational district committee held a big meeting there and about 800 people attended. Dr. J. B. Jackson, of the county board of health, was present and delivered an interesting address on Sanitation in the Schools. The people of the vicinity provided an excellent basket dinner for all who attended and the meeting was a success in every way.

WILLIAM WENE

Loses His Life in a Small Wreck.

William Wene, a well known railroad man, was killed in a slight wreck at Mt. Vernon, Ind., Thursday night. Mr. Wene formerly had a run on this division of the L. & N. and lived in Nashville, but for some time previous to his death had resided in Evansville. A remarkable incident connected with his death was that the passenger train which ran into the caboose, causing his death, was in charge of his brother, Conductor Henry T. Wene.

Millionaire Tells of Notable Events in His Career.

DEFENDS THE STANDARD OIL

Corporation Here to Stay, Says Oil
King, and Should Be Created and Regulated Under Federal Laws—Predicts
Great Future For Rising Generation.

John D. Rockefeller appears for the first time as a writer in a series of articles on "Some Random Reminiscences of Men and Events of the Past of which recently appeared in the October issue of the World's Work.

Mr. Rockefeller starts at the outset that on a rainy morning, when golf is wanting, "I am tempted to become a garrulous old man and tell some stories of men and things which have happened in an active life." He refers to the "stent to which he has been associated with interesting people, especially in the business world, and continues:

"If one talks about one's experiences, there is a natural temptation to charge one with traveling the easy road to egotism; if one keeps silent, the inference of wrongfulness has been associated with me, and it would then be said that there is no valid defense to be offered.

"It has not been my custom to press my affairs forward into public gaze, but I have come to see that if my family and friends want some record of things which might shed light on matters that have been somewhat discussed it is right that I should yield to their advice and in this informal way go over again some of the events which have made life interesting to me.

"If a tenth of the things that have been said are true, then dozens of able and faithful men who have been associated with me, many of whom have passed away, must have been guilty of grave faults. For myself I had decided to say nothing, hoping that after my death the truth would gradually come to the surface and posterity would do strict justice, but while I live and can testify to certain things it seems fair that I should refer to some points which I hope will help to set forth several much discussed happenings in a new light. I am convinced that they have not been fully understood.

"It has been said that I forced the men who became my partners in the oil business to join with me. I would not have been so shortsighted. If it were true that I followed such tactics I ask would it have been possible to make of such men lifelong companions? For fourteen years I have been out of business and in eight or ten years have only once gone to the company's office."

Mr. Rockefeller speaks of the development of the Standard Oil company and says that the plan of selling direct to the consumer and the exceptionally rapid growth of the business "bred a certain antagonism which, I suppose, could not have been avoided." Of the direct selling to the consumer he says: "This was done in a fair spirit and with the consideration for every one's rights. We did not ruthlessly go after the trade of our competitors and attempt to ruin it by cutting prices or instituting a spy system. If any of the employees of the company were ever seen going after sales they acted in violation of the expressed and known wishes of the company."

Mr. Rockefeller says that in the early days of the oil industry was considered a most hazardous undertaking, not altogether unlike speculative mining undertakings. "None of us," he says, "ever dreamed of the magnitude of what proved to be the later expansion."

Further on he says: "Another thing to be remembered about the so-called 'corner' is that there has been no 'water' introduced into the capital operation we felt that oil and water would not have mixed, nor in all these years have we been able to wait for money which the Standard owed. It is a common thing to hear people say that this company has crushed out its competitors. Only the untrained could make such a statement. It has and always has had and always will have hundreds of active competitors. The Standard has not now and never did have a corner on oil, nor is its success due to any one man, but to the multitude of able men who are working together."

On the subject of the modern corporation the article says:

"Beyond question there is a supposition of corporations. There may be reason for such supposition very often, for a corporation may be more or less immoral, just as a man may be moral or the reverse, but it is folly to condemn all corporations because some are bad or even to be unduly suspicious of them, because some are bad. But the corporation in form and character has come to stay. That is a thing that may be depended upon. It is a fact to note about advantages of individual combinations. They are a necessity. And if Americans are to have the privilege of extending their business in all the states of the Union and into foreign countries as well they are a necessity on a large scale and require the agency of more than one corporation.

"If I were to suggest any legislation on, in lieu thereof state legislation as nearly uniform as possible encouraging combinations of persons and capital for the purpose of carrying on industries, but sufficient to prevent frauds upon the public.

"The great business interests will, I hope, so comport themselves that foreign capital will consider it a desirable thing to hold shares in American companies. It is for Americans to see that foreign investors are well and honestly treated, so that they will never regret purchases of our securities. I may speak thus frankly because I am an investor in many American enterprises, but a controller of none, with one exception and that a company which has not been much of a dividend payer, and I, like all the rest, am dependent upon the honest and capable administration of the industries. I firmly and sincerely believe that they will be so managed."

Under the heading "The Modern Corporation" Mr. Rockefeller expresses the views he has expressed before the Industrial Commission in 1905, then he suggested federal incorporation and control and in lieu of that state legislation as nearly uniform as possible. "I still feel," he says, "as I did in 1905."

"I am far from believing that this (corporation) regulation will adversely affect the individual," says Mr. Rockefeller, dwelling on "The New Opportunities." "The great economic era we are entering will give splendid opportunity to the young man of the future. I am naturally an optimist, and when it comes to a statement of what our people will accomplish in the future I am unable to express myself with sufficient enthusiasm."

After commenting the wealthy men who do not retire from business either through pride in seeing the further development of their plans or through a sense of duty to their associates, Rockefeller concludes the first chapter of his autobiography with a paragraph that hints of his activity as "a beginner."

"Some men of business," he says, "are so absorbed in their business affairs that they hardly have time to think of anything else. If they do not interest themselves in a work outside of their own office and undertake to raise money they begin with an apology, as if they are ashamed of themselves. I am no beginner," I have heard many of them say, "to which I could only reply, 'I am sorry you feel that way about it.' I have been this sort of beginner all my life, and the experiences which I have had were so interesting and important to me that I will venture to speak of them later."

Other subjects to be taken up in the course of his autobiography will include the trust issue in philanthropy.

SUBMARINE WARSHIP.

Holland Says It Will Be Able to Cross the Atlantic.

John P. Holland of East Orange, N. J., inventor of the submarine boat, has devised a deep sea submarine which, he says, will be able to cross the Atlantic and revolutionize modern warfare. He says the new invention has been sold to a foreign government, whose name he declines to make public.

"The new boat will have a speed of 30 knots an hour," said Mr. Holland recently. "It will be manned by a crew of five and will be so constructed as to lift the submarine from the plane of a coast and harbor defender to an instrument of aggressive warfare. I offered the plan to the United States navy department, but received no encouragement, so had to sell abroad. The navy department disclaims the intentions of Americans and places a premium upon devices tried by other powers."

The new boat will be cigar shaped and can be sunk to a depth of 200 feet. It will be strengthened to resist pressure under water and will discharge a torpedo at twice the speed of the present torpedo. The vessel, according to the inventor, can accompany a battleship on any voyage, no matter what the length.

Almost Perfect Mammoth. According to a St. Louis dispatch, the expedition sent by the Imperial Zoological society to recover the remains of the mammoth recently returned with its prize, which proved to be the finest and most complete specimen ever obtained. Even the trunk of the animal was secured, having been preserved unchanged by the intense cold. The whole skeleton is intact, the head and jaws are perfect except for two teeth, and the body is covered with a well preserved hide and shaggy hair. The specimen is the first ever excavated with the trunk in good condition.

RIDER REPORTS

Warning Notices Posted in Cotton Patches.

Jonesboro, Ark., Oct. 8.—News is received from Earle, that three negroes, owned and operated by negroes, were recently burned after notices had been sent ordering them to close.

Notices were posted in the same neighborhood, it is said, in every cotton patch within a radius of several miles, ordering farmers not to pick cotton until the price had advanced to 12 cents. Two gins at Earle, though in respect of warning notices, are doing a record breaking business.

Watchmen are retained, however to protect the property.

"Who's Who" in the Story.

"SATAN" SANDERSON, the hero, dare-devil, quixotic friend and minister of the Gospel.

HUGH STIRES, prodigal and criminal.

JESSICA HOLME, the beautiful heroine, helpless in the rush of events and the principal sufferer in a case of mixed identity.

MRS. HALLORAN, the camp orator.

DAVID STIRES, stern, yet forgiving, and at the last made happy by another's unhappiness.

THE BISHOP, the victim of a misunderstanding.

HALLELUJAH JONES, the religious fanatic on whose shoulders rests the whole weight of the story.

EMMETT PRENDERGAST, the false friend, perjurer and thief.

THE SHERIFF, who is very much divided between duty and inclination.

"BIG" DEVIL, who turns champion instead of prosecutor after the hero's race with death.

Slowly, yet fearfully, she stretched out her hand and laid it on his. As if by the touch the mutterings ceased.

She bent and touched her lips to his forehead.

The eyes opened, and a confused, troubled look crept to them. Then they closed again, and the look faded out into a peace that remained.

A thrill ran through her, the sense of moral power of the weak over the strong, of the feminine over the masculine.

A rising flush stained her cheeks with a sudden impulse and with a guilty backward glance she bent and touched her lips to his forehead.

She drew back quickly, her face flooded with color, caught her breath, then, drawing her head over her head, went swiftly to the door and was lost in the darkness.

When toward midnight the fever ebbed, Sanderson had fallen into a deep sleep of exhaustion, from which he opened his eyes next morning upon the figure of Prendergast sitting, pipe in mouth, in the sunny doorway.

He lifted himself on his elbow. That crafty face had been inexplicably worsened with the delirious fantasies of his fever. Where and when had he known it? Then in a great daze welled over him the memory of his last conscious hours—the "one in the million," the fight, the music, the sudden appalling discovery of his name and reputation. He remembered the sickening wave of self disgust, the fierce agony of resentment that had beat in his every vein as he walked up the darkening street. He remembered the thrown quarry. He remembered another missile had struck him or he had been set upon, kicked and pummeled into insensibility. This old man—a minor probably, for there were picks and shovels in the corner—had succored him. He had been ill, there was lassitude in every limb, and shadowy recollections tantalized him. He retained a dim consciousness of a woman's face—the face he had seen on the balcony—leaning near him, bringing into a painful disorder a sense of grateful coolness, of fragrance and of rest.

As he stared again at the seated figure, the grim face seemed like a grisly specter, deriding, thrusting its haggard presence upon him. In this little community, which apparently he had forsaken and to which he had by chance returned, he stood a rogue and a scoundrel, a thing to point the finger at and to avoid. The question that had burned his brain to fire flamed up again. The town despised him. What had been his error? How had he become a pariah? And by what miracle had he been so altered as to look upon himself with loathing?

He lifted himself upright, dropping his feet to the floor. At the movement the man on the doorstep rose quickly and came forward.

"You're better, Hugh," he said. "Take it easy. Don't get up just yet. I'm going to cook you some breakfast."

He turned to the hearth, kicked the smoldering log ends together and set a saucepan on them. "You'll be stronger when you've got something to chew your ribs," he added.

"How long have I been lying here?" asked Harry.

"Only since last night. You've had a fever."

"Where is my dog?"

"Does?" said the other. "I never knew you had one."

Harry's lips set bitterly. It had fared more harshly, then, than he. It had been a ready object for the crowd to wreak their hatred upon, because it belonged to him—because it was Hugh Stires' dog!

"Is this your cabin, my friend?"

The figure bending over the hearth straightened itself with a jerk, and the blinking yellow eyes looked hard at him. Prendergast came close to the bunk.

"That's the game you played in the town," he said, with a surly sneer. "It's all right for those that take it in, but you needn't try to hamboogie me, pretending you don't know your own claim and cabin! I'm no such fool!"

A dull flush came to Harry's brow. Here was a page from that insidious past that faced him. His own cabin! And his own claim! Well, why not? "You are mistaken," he said calmly. "I am not pretending. I cannot remember you."

Prendergast laughed in an ugly, derisive way. "I suppose you've forgotten the last year we've lived here together and the gold dust we've gathered in now and again—alright it all, have you?"

Harry stood up. The motion brought a temporary dislodge, but it passed. He walked to the door and gazed out on the pleasant green of the hillside. On a tree near by was nailed a rough, weather beaten board on which was scrawled: "The Little Paymaster Cabin."

He saw the grass grown gravel trench, evidence of abandoned work. He had been a miner. That in itself was honest toil.

"The claim is good, then," he said over his shoulder. "We found the pay?"

Prendergast contemplated him a moment in grim silence, with a scowl. "You're either really fuddled, Hugh," he said then, "or else you're a star player actor and up to something else. Well, have you your own way? It's all the same to me. But you can't pull the wool over my eyes long!"

There were mockery and threat in his tone; more than both, the evil intimacy in his words gave Harry a quiver of disgust. This man had been his associate. That one hour in the town had shown him what his own life there had been.

What should he do? Forsake forever the neighborhood where he had made his blistering mark? Fling all aside and start again somewhere and leave behind this disgraceful present, with that face that had looked into his from above the dusty street?

If fate intended that, why had it turned him back? If such was the bad he had made, he would lie in it. He would drink the gall and vinegar without whimpering. Whatever lay behind he would live it down. This man at least had befriended him.

He turned into the room. "Perhaps I shall remember after a while." He took the saucepan from Prendergast's hand. "I'll cook the breakfast," he said.

Prendergast filled his pipe and watched him. "I guess there are hats in your belly, son enough, Hugh," he said at length. "You never offered to do your stilet before."

Harry looked at him. "What?"

sion had not heard of the incident in the saloon which had precipitated the fight with Devil, and with sympathetic rhetoric Mrs. Halloran told this too.

"Why does Smoky Mountain hate him so? What has he done?" asked Jessica.

Mrs. Halloran shook her head. "I never knew anything myself," she said judiciously. "I reckon the town alium counted him just a general low down. The rest is only suspicion and give the dog a bad name."

There had been comfort for Jessica in this interview. Mrs. Halloran's story had materially increased the poignant force of her pity. What had seemed to her a vulgar brawl had been in reality a courageous and unselfish championship of a defenseless outcast. Thinking of this, the self blame and contrition which she had felt when she listened to the violin assailed her anew, till she seemed a very part of the guilt, an equal sinner by omission.

Yet she rode homeward that day with almost a light heart.

As Harry stood in the cabin doorway looking after Prendergast toward the town, glistening far below in the morning sunlight, he thought bitterly of his reception there.

"They all knew me," he thought. "Every one knew me on the street, in the hotel. They know me for what I have been to them. Yet to me it is all a blank. What shameful deeds have I done?" He shrank from memory now. "What was I doing so far away, where was I going, on the night when I was picked up beside the railroad track? I may be a drunkard," he said to himself. "No, in the past month I have drunk hard, but not for the taste of the liquor. I may be a gambler, I may be a cheat, a thief. Yet how is it possible for bad deeds to be blotted out and leave no trace? Actions breed habit if they do not spring from it, and habit automatically repeated becomes character. I feel no inherent propensity to rob or defraud. Shall I? Will these things come back to me if my memory does?"

In the battle that he fought now he turned, even in his weakness, to manual labor, striving to dull his thought with mechanical movement. He cleaned and put to rights both rooms and sorted their litter of odds and ends. But at times the inclining thought became well nigh insupportable. When the conflict was fiercest, he would think of a girl's face once seen, and the thought would restrain him. Who was she? Why had her look pierced through him? In that hateful career that seemed so curiously alien could she have had a part?

He did not know that she of whom he wondered in the blithest of those hours had been very near him; that on her way up the mountain she had stolen down to the Knob to look through the parted bushes to the cabin with the blue spiral rising from its chimney.

Though the homely task to which he turned failed to allay his struggle by nightfall, Harry had put the warring elements under. When Prendergast returned at supper time, the candle was lighted in its wall box, the dined tea kettle was singing over a crackling fire and Harry was perching over the scoring of the last utensil.

Prendergast looked the orderly interior over on the threshold with a contemptuous amusement. "Almost thought I was in church," he said. He took off his coat and lazily watched the other cook the frugal evening meal. "Excess my not volunteering," he observed. "You do it so nicely I'm almost afraid you'll have another attack of that forgettery of yours and go back to the old line."

Presently he looked at the bunk, clean and springy with fresh-out spruce shoots. He went into it, knelt down and thrust an arm into the empty space beneath it. He got up hastily.

"What have you done with that?" he demanded, with an angry snarl.

"With what?" Harry turned his head as he set two tin plates on the bare table.

"With what was under here?"

"There was nothing there but an old horse skin," said Harry. "It's hanging on the side of the cabin."

With an oath Prendergast flung open the door and went outside. He reentered quickly with the white hide in his arms, wrapped it in a blanket and thrust it back under the bunk.

"Has any one been here today since you put it out there?" he asked quickly.

"No," said Harry, surprised. "Why?"

Prendergast chuckled. The chuckle grew a guffaw, and he sat down, slapping his thigh. Presently he went to the wall, took the chamela skin bag from its hiding place and poured some of its yellow contents into his palm. "That's why. Do you remember that came from?"

FOR KENTUCKY—Tuesday Fair,

Andrew Carnegie has given $20,000 to the Republican campaign fund.

Owensboro registered 3,276 votes, 1,665 of them Democrats, 1,305 Republicans and 316 Independents.

Wm. Cromwell, who was stricken with paralysis at Frankfort ten days ago, is better and prospects are good for his early recovery.

Chicago beat New York in the last game by 4 to 2 and won the pennant of the National League championship for 1908.

The Breckinridge News, for the last eight or ten years a Republican newspaper, has come out for Ben Johnson for Congress in the Fourth district.

Jos. M. Brown, Democrat, was elected Governor of Georgia last week by about 80,000 over Yancey Carter, Independent.

The Louisville Herald is still using cartoons of Taft wearing a straw hat. It is no longer necessary for straw to show which way the cyclone is coming that will hit "Me Too" next month.

The registered vote in Bowling Green was 2,006, of which 1,008 were Democrats, 732 Republicans and 186 Independents. Of the Third class cities, Hopkinsville with 1,800 votes beat Henderson's 1,635 and ran a close race with Bowling Green.

Gov. Willson must not make the mistake of supposing that everybody who joined in the honors shown him during his trip to Western Kentucky is for him politically. In this city half of his audience were Bryan Democrats, many of whom admire the Governor for the fight he is making to restore order in Kentucky. The people of Kentucky are tired of night riding and no wise politician will try to make votes by abusing the Governor for trying to suppress lawlessness.

Dr. Jos. L. Barker, the new chairman of the Association committee of Christian county, has assumed a prominent place at once in the affairs of the executive committee. Dr. Barker has done much to bring about good feeling in this county by making a loyal and almost successful fight for a Hopkinsville man for grader, a position that means much for a local market, as is shown by the fact that the Springfield and Clarksville markets have sold practically all of their holdings. Dr. Barker was made one of the three members of the new finance committee, a position for which he is especially well fitted.

The first of the series of seven baseball games between Detroit American and Chicago National for the world's championship was played at Detroit Saturday in a drizzling rain that lasted throughout six innings. Victory went to Chicago—10 to 6. The second game was played at Chicago Sunday and won by Chicago by a score of 6 to 1.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Southern Baptist church at Lynchburg, Va., has resigned to go to Oklahoma City and a dispatch says the step was made necessary because Dr. Jones recently married "a prominent and charming Methodist woman." Objections were raised and he promptly resigned.

Judge G. B. Bingham will not be a candidate for re-election as county judge of Trigg county, and Capt. John C. Dabney is a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

Mr. Bryan spoke in Missouri Saturday breaking the record with 26 speeches in one day. Mr. Kern closed his southern campaign at Huntington, W. Va.

Mr. M. H. Smith, President of the L. & N. Railroad, denies a report that he would vote for Bryan and says he is for Taft.

Walter Wellman says Maryland will go Democratic this year, as the labor vote is for Bryan.

Ollie James in Illinois.

Following is an extract from one of Ollie James' recent eloquent speeches in Illinois:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am glad to come to Illinois. I am glad to meet the people of this great commonwealth. The truth of it, you look so much like Kentuckians I almost feel at home. (Applause.) Kentucky has furnished to Illinois many of the great citizenship which has made your state renowned. Kentucky gave to you Adlai Stevenson (Applause), and you gave him to rule as Vice President of the Union, and unless I mistake the enthusiasm I behold everywhere you are going to elect him your Governor in November. (Great applause.) Kentucky gave to Illinois Abraham Lincoln, Illinois gave him to the republic; the republic gave him to the ages. (Applause.)

"I greet you as part of this great Union, which was only cemented into the fraternal bonds of a stronger union by a war, which is only remembered to recall the courage of two of the mightiest armies, displaying courage which has found no counterpart in the conflicts of the world. (Applause.) Disraeli, which I love, sends to her brethren of the North the assurance that she yields to none in her love for the stately banner of the republic; and that if Abraham Lincoln were alive this night there is not a foot of Southern soil upon which he might not pitch his tent under Dixie's sky and pillow his head upon a Confederate soldier's knee and sleep, and sleep in safety. (Great cheering.)

"Illinois gave to Nebraska the mighty crusader who is bearing aloft the stainless banner of Democracy. Nebraska gave him to humanity, and humanity is calling him to emancipate the struggling millions of oppressed Americans from the unholy clutches of oppressive greed. (Great cheering.)"

Madisonville Won.

Madisonville defeated S. K. C. in a game of football on the former's grounds Saturday. The score was 20 to 0.

VARNISH FOR SHOES.

Preparation Gives Good Results in Restoring Old Footwear.

A waterproof shoe varnish resembling patent leather in luster is compounded of shellac, one ounce; alcohol, three ounces; a pinch of lampblack to color, says Scientific American. Owing to the unfavorable action of alcohol on leather this shoe varnish is not to be recommended for brand new shoes, but to rehabilitate old shoes to a pristine shine it is unsurpassed.

The tendency of shoes being cracked by it may very largely be averted by first treating the leather to several coats of fish oil or vasoline. Then, when the shoe is dry, the varnish is applied, over which a very thin coat of paraffine is applied hot and the excess immediately wiped off. The shoes should be brushed with a fine duster until the surface is smooth and apparently dry and free from oil or paraffine. The shoe varnish is then thinly applied with a small sponge fastened to a wire. Several thin coats put on several hours apart may be necessary to get full result. After that usually one thin application is sufficient. Patent leather paste polish rubbed over it and finished with fannel softens the glitter and leaves a very handsome bright surface. The chief other advantage to be derived from its use comes from its resistance to water. It is, therefore, invaluable when applied to preserve the good looks of the sides of the soles and heels of shoes to be worn in bad weather and even to waterproof their bottoms.

A Process For Staining Wood.

Hitherto wood has been stained by impregnating it while still fresh with a solution of some coloring matter. The solution was aqueous into the wood under a high pressure. According to a new Swiss process, the wood is impregnated with a solution of a coloring matter in hydrocarbons such as petroleum. For this purpose the wood is placed in a cask filled with the colored solution so as to be completely covered. There it remains until it is thoroughly impregnated by the solution. The staining in the cask may be effected with or without pressure, cold or warm. In this manner it is possible to stain any wood, either fresh or dry.

New England's Ice Cap.

Professor Louis Agassiz many years ago first announced that the ice sheet or glacial flow at the northwest of Maine could not have been less than a mile deep, while later geologists have confirmed his statement, adding the more recent conclusion that the ice was of that thickness at least over the larger part of New England.

FOURTH SOLDIER

Figures In a Black Patch Romance.

Paduch, Ky., Oct. 9.—Another Black Patch romance was consummated here last evening when Miss Ruth Smith, of Princeton, one of the witnesses for the defense in the Hollowell night rider trials in the Federal Court, and a relative of the defendants, was married to J. J. Sweeney, of Owensboro, a member of Company C, Third Kentucky, stationed at Princeton. The couple met and fell in love during the three months that soldier Sweeney was camped there. They were married at the home of Charles Friederich, 233 North Sixth street.

Back In 1854.

Editor Bell, of the Georgetown Times, tells of the drouth in 1854, which makes the present dry spell dwindle into insignificance in comparison. It did not rain that year from June 17 to some time in October. Three negroes were hanged on the day it rained in June at Versailles for killing a white man, and a white man was hanged the day it rained in October, and the saying got current that somebody had to be hanged to bring a rain. Maybe that is what is needed now. Bring on another man.—State Journal.

New Horse Disease.

Anthrax, regarded by the medical profession as the most virulent disease which attacks cattle and horses, has broken out in a certain quarter of Shelby county. The State authorities have asked the Federal authorities to take command of the fight against the disease, explaining their action on the ground of lack of co-operation of local health officers.

BABY'S ITCH EASILY CURED

Infantile Eczema Quickly Relieved by External Use of Wintergreen Compound.

Infantile eczema, which has baffled the skill of the best physicians for so many years, at last seems to be curable with great ease.

Results of the last two years indicate conclusively that baby's itch, infantile eczema and other skin diseases of children can be very simply cured by the application of a compound composed of oil of wintergreen, thymol and glycerine, as in B. B. B. Prescription.

The Rev. Lewis Steeley, of Weatherville, Pa., writes:

"Our baby boy's little face was so dreadfully covered with eczema that blood and water ran from the sores nearly all the time. After using 31 bottles of D. D. D. Prescription we are so happy to tell you he is entirely cured and the disease has never broken out again. If this letter is in any way a help to other sufferers, you may publish it."

If you have a child which is suffering with this terrible itch, we are sure you will not neglect one hour to give your baby the right kind of relief. We have seen too often how quickly the remedy mentioned above takes the itch away at once and how all the cures seem to be permanent; we have seen this too often to hesitate at all in recommending the remedy for your children.

Says State Inspector Regarding Mr. Milward's Acts.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 9.—State Inspector M. H. Thatcher today filed with the Governor a report of his investigation of the charges that Stanley Milward, a member of the State Board of Control, had been using the laundry of the Lexington asylum for his private washing, had ice delivered to him daily from the asylum and also vegetables from the asylum gardens.

The inspector includes in his report a signed statement from Col. Scott and Gen. Haley, two other members of the board, in which they say that they had told Milward there would be no impropriety in his getting ice, vegetables and laundry at the asylum. The report of the inspector also shows that Mr. Milward, in order to stop any further comment, has paid in full for everything that he got from the asylum, and has discontinued the ice, vegetables and laundry.

GETS ARM BROKEN

Returning From Hopkinsville
Last Thursday Night.

Clarence Light, son of P. T. Light who lives in Canton district, got his left arm broken about two inches above the elbow as he was returning from the circus at Hopkinsville last Thursday night. He was driving from Hopkinsville in a buggy with his brother, Josh Light, and about two miles west of Gracy, some part of the harness broke and the horse began to kick, the horse striking Mr. Light on the arm, breaking the bone.—Cadiz Record.

TWICE CURED OF SKIN TROUBLES

First Case a Rash Which Itched and Stung—Threatened Ten Years Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—But Both Times the Sufferer's

RELIANCE IN CUTICURA PROVED WELL-FOUNDED

"About twelve or fifteen years ago, while living in West Virginia, I had a breaking-out, and it itched and stung so badly that I could not leave my house because of it. I saw three doctors and they did not agree on what it was, so one of them gave me something that he called medicine, but I called it soda water. I didn't just use it well, washed in rain-water. Then I got some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They were new to me, but I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had a grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran its course, but I was not getting any better. I sent for another set of the Cuticura Remedies. I used them three times and cured the breaking-out. Now I won't be without Cuticura, S. J. Hannon, R. F. D. 3, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

NEGROES TAKE CUE

From White People and Become Night Riders.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 10.—News has reached here of the arrest at Myersville, Miss., of six negroes charged with posting night riding warnings against cotton ginning. Poses are searching for two others wanted on the same charge.

The alleged confession of one of these negroes, Walter Robinson, declares that negro organizations have been formed for night riding purposes in both Mississippi and Louisiana. Robinson said he had no knowledge whether such organizations are extensive.

He said a negro from Louisiana, who claimed to have organized night riders in that State, had formed the Myersville band.

On October a ginney was burned at Shipland, Miss., supposedly by night riders, and the authorities at Myersville are now investigating to ascertain whether negroes are responsible.

Brought Home.

James A. Boyd of Kelly's station, Ky., who was brought to police station October 3 by Eugene Angel, a farmer living near Stacer's station, who had found Boyd on his farm talking excitedly about night riding, was taken home yesterday by a relative. The police say Boyd is plainly insane.—Evansville Courier.

USEFUL DESERT PLANT.

The Sotol, Once Thought Worthless, Full of Alcohol.

Another wild desert plant that grows profusely upon many millions of acres of land in the mountainous region of western Texas now is being used as a profitable source of revenue. It is the sotol, which is said to be found in no other parts of the United States. It is of quick, sturdy growth. It long has been known that alcohol could be made from this plant, but it is only within the last few months that steps have been taken to utilize this knowledge in a commercial way by the manufacture of denatured alcohol from the large bulb which forms a part of the growth, says the Kansas City Star. This bulb is situated just above the ground and frequently is a foot in diameter. The percentage of alcohol which it contains is said to be larger than any other known product.

It was not until the last session of congress that authority was granted for the manufacture of denatured alcohol from the sotol plant. As a result of this federal permission a sotol distillery has been established at El Paso, and large quantities of the sotol bulb are being made from the Alpine section to that place for conversion into the denatured product.

When the early Spanish explorers first penetrated the region along the Rio Grande river below Alpine more than two centuries ago they found that the Pueblo and other Indian tribes had knowledge of the medicinal properties of the sotol plant. Primitive stills were in operation, from which a fiery white liquor was obtained. The Indians were wont to indulge freely in this native liquor. The sotol liquor still is a favorite beverage among the Mexicans of the border. The American cowboy of this region has an intimate knowledge of the "fighting" qualities of this liquor. It is one of the phases of initiation which the tenderfoot is always put through upon his first trip to the border.

"The main objection to the stuff is that you've got to run a mile to get your breath after you have taken a drink of it," said a cowboy the other day.

NEW NIGHT RIDERS.

Why They Have Organized in North Carolina's Cotton Belt.

The Night Rider has made his appearance in North Carolina at last. He differs from the Kentucky species in that the Tar Heel product is a cotton grower instead of a cotton raiser. A special dispatch recently received at Raleigh, N. C., from Cleveland county states that a large cotton gin owner whose establishment near Shelby has been served with written notice from a band of cotton growers who are bent on keeping the new crop of cotton from being rushed upon the market. The threats were the gin owner that the cotton farmers in the lead of the movement are "determined that cotton shall be held till the price reaches 12 cents and in order to force the price to advance in price it has been determined that all ginning of raw cotton shall cease for the present."

The ginster is then notified that unless he shall close his ginney until cotton has reached the price of 12 cents Night Riders will take care of both him and his establishment, and the specific threat is made that the ginney will be burned if the order of the Night Riders is not complied with. Reports are received from other counties of the preliminary organization of an element of cotton growers for the purpose of preventing those of their neighbors who would from hurrying the new crop of cotton to market. It is expected that the governor will be called upon to take action in the matter soon, as it is believed that in some communities the local authorities may be unable to cope with the extensive numbers and power of the law defying element.

Dentistry For Dogs.

West and dentists in London have added a new department to their business by allotting certain hours of their working days to doctoring show dogs' teeth. The price for scraping and cleaning a dog's teeth is $5.25, for refilling and cleaning one tooth, $1.25; for making a bleached or inlaid, $4.25; for scaling or grinder, $5.25. A full set of teeth for a dog costs from $100 to $135. Dentistry for dogs is said to be a necessity, particularly for show dogs. A decayed tooth in a show dog's mouth means loss of points in competition.

HEART TO HEART TALK

Between the Tabernacle Manager and His Many Patrons.

If the papers will grant us space we wish to go over some matters with the public. First and foremost the Tabernacle is 'out of debt,' and the course in future will not be a charitable institution, but will be run along business lines. You will not be asked to buy season tickets because the Tabernacle is in debt, or because the Tabernacle "needs the money." We have gotten sick and tired of this old argument, and we know you have. The average man in the past bought season tickets because it was good common sense to do so, not because he thought he was helping the Tabernacle. Our business has increased every year for the last four years; we don't mind your having the figures, we are not ashamed of them, as anyone who knows much of the League knows there is never much if any profit, and most courses barely keep out of debt.

Season 1904-5, net $337.50; season 1905-6, net $625.00; season 1906-7 net $740.05; season 1907-8, net $780.50. Each and every season we have paid out more money for talent. Our expenses increase each year of course, but our books show the above profits. We keep the Tabernacle property up, and improve same. This season we will begin to put opera chairs in the house, working along as our means will permit. This is badly needed, and will be the next matter that we will take up, in the way of improvements.

We have a good stage, well made, well lighted, and we need dressing rooms, but we will insist upon the talent making good with what we have until we can get our large audiences more comfortably seated. Now we feel that you will heartily agree with us in this move. We find this matter has taken up so much space, we will be compelled to tell you of the great merit of our next course in some future talk.

The tickets for the course this season will be printed in Philadelphia, not that they can print them any better than the home folks, but they are so prepared they can reserve every seat in the house, reservations being printed on each and every seat, so there will be absolutely no way for any mistake to occur. This is for your convenience, as well as our "peace of mind." No seats will be reserved in advance, but will be issued in rotation, first come first served. This is the only fair and square way it can be done, and we hope we will not be asked: "Well, you know I can't be there, so please save me — seats."

The Lyceum meeting at Oshkosh, Wis., was great, and we heard on the regular program, and at the "stunt fests" a great many platform people. In the past we have bought talent "sight unseen," not knowing whether they would "make good" or not, but all the time "hoping for the best." The manager's standard has been a little higher, and he has been disappointed in some much heralded talent. No one can buy intelligently unless he knows something of the artist's work. We have asked our patrons on two occasions, in circular letters sent them, to tell us what they liked and what they didn't like. From 600 such letters we had less than 25 replies. So this was a failure, and we must judge our patrons' desires by the box office returns. This we have done in the last two seasons. This covers about everything, except that our books are open for inspection, if any one cares to look over same. Our course for next season will cost more money than we have ever paid, but this must be done by any manager if he wishes his course to be permanent. A lyceum course must get

TEXAS WEED

Experiment of Raising Tobacco Results in Great Success.

Nacogdoches, Tex., Oct. 10.—The "night rider" troubles in Kentucky and other tobacco-growing sections of the North have served to greatly stimulate the growing of leaf tobacco in Texas. The industry has already reached considerable proportions in the Nacogdoches section of the State, where the land is said to be especially fitted for tobacco growing. The Federal Government established a tobacco experimental farm near Nacogdoches a few years ago, and the remarkable success attained upon this farm soon attracted the attention of the planters in the surrounding section. Small tracts of land began to be planted in tobacco, and this acreage has increased year by year, until this year there were grown nearly 200 acres of tobacco in the immediate vicinity of Nacogdoches. The crop was harvested in July and brought the growers a net return of $150 per acre. It is claimed that the profits of the industry in the Nacogdoches region exceed that of any other tobacco-growing locality in the United States, and that a smaller outlay of capital is necessary than in other places. A soil survey has been made in the Nacogdoches section under the auspices of the Federal Government, and it was found that there are more than 200,000 acres of land suitable for growing tobacco.

The planters are so enthusiastic over the success of their efforts in growing tobacco that many of them will no longer plant cotton, but will devote all of their lands to tobacco culture. Men who have an expert knowledge of growing and harvesting the plants have been brought from Kentucky, and the industry is carried on in the most scientific manner possible. It is estimated that not less than 5,000 acres of land around Nacogdoches will be planted in tobacco the coming season. Large tobacco firms in the North are preparing to erect warehouses in the district to care for the future crops. The land upon which this tobacco is grown was valued at only a few dollars per acre until the new industry was started. It is a source of wealth to the people of the Nacogdoches section, and the growing of the product promises to extend to other localities of Eastern Texas.

Bankers "Between the Devil and the Deep Sea."

A special from Denver says the bankers there are "between the devil and the deep sea" on the matter of guaranteeing bank deposits and postal savings banks. The people are determined to have their deposits guaranteed and the banker hesitates at the change. The savings bank section unanimously opposed postal savings banks and here was some division in regard to the matter of guaranteeing deposits, though most of them oppose either. Between the two, guaranteeing bank deposits is much the best thing for the bankers and the depositors.

WOODCHOPPING TEST.

Vermont Axman's Exploit to Decide a Wager.

STANDING TIMBER CUT DOWN

Ed Moote of Amsten, Vt., Easily Cuts, Splits and Piles Five Cords of Wood 'Twixt Sunrise and Sunset—Won $100 For His Day's Work.

Ed Moote of Amsten, Vt., who lays claim to the title of champion woodchopper of Vermont, recently added to his fame by chopping, splitting and piling five cords of wood from standing trees between sunrise and sunset. He won $100 for his day's work, and Max Everts, oldest son of the late United States Senator William M. Everts, added $1,000 to his bank account, as he backed Moote to accomplish the feat.

There were present Samuel G. Blythe of New York, who had made the principal wager with Mr. Everts, and many prominent Vermonters. The contest took place at Windsor, near Amsten, Vt., on a farm owned by Mr. Everts. The chopping began at sunrise, twenty-two minutes after 5, and was to end at sunset, ten minutes to 6. Moote was attended by his son Frank, to keep the axes sharp, and the chopping of the trees and the splitting of the wood to his father as fast as they were needed. C. M. Lawrence, a civil engineer of Felchville, officiated as the measurer.

Moote by half past 10 had cut down eighteen trees, ranging in length from sixty to seventy feet and from nine to thirteen inches in diameter at the base. He had chopped and split three and a half cords, and he said that his muscle was as good as when he began.

It is seldom that a woodchopper has had such a snappy defeat company to witness his work. With occasional drinks of hash and more frequent drinks of milk and brandy, Moote chopped away, and at noon about four cords were on the ground, cut and split, but not piled. At that time he declared the job would be finished at 4 o'clock, and the result proved the accuracy of his prophecy. At just fifteen minutes after 4 o'clock the official measurer announced that the long pile contained five and one-eighth cords of wood, and Moote stopped work with another eighth of a cord on the ground already split. Twenty-five pine trees seventy-five feet tall had been cut down. Mr. Blythe, who showed himself a good loser, John M. Everts in his congratulations, and Moote mounted the pile, ax in hand, while a hundred cameras were focused on him. He had done his task, with an hour and a half to spare.

In the town of Weatherfield, midway between Windsor on the Central Vermont railway and Cavendish on the Rutland railroad, under the shadow of Ascutney mountain, lies this little hamlet called Amsten. A quarter of a century ago Charles Amsten built there some kilns in which to burn the lime which he found in abundance along the Black River at Amsten. Then he added a sawmill, a gristmill and a general store, and Uncle Sam added a postoffice. The place speedily became a center of trade for miles around and prospered greatly until the death of Mr. Amsten some ten years ago.

Others then managed the property with varying degrees of success until it was brought to the attention of Mr. Everts five years ago. The proposition looked so good to him that he bought the entire outfit and made Luther C. White of Windsor his manager. The property includes several timber tracts, which are being cleared. In one of the reports from Windsor Mr. Everts the former had told him of the timber cutting capacity of Ed Moote and had rated Ed's capacity at about twenty cords a week, cut, split and piled. That looked like a pretty good record to Everts, and always proud of his native state and the prowess of its people, he told the story to several of his friends.

One of these friends was present at a dinner which Mr. Everts gave to some friends at the New Willard in Washington last spring, and Mr. Everts was asked to explain how this man Moote could average more than five cords of wood a day, cut, split and piled. The explanation was not at all satisfactory to his guests, and Everts was immediately bombarded by offers of wagers that neither Ed Moote nor any other Vermonteer could perform such a feat. Mr. Everts' spring in strict is tempered with caution, and it occurred to him that White might be mistaken in his estimate of Moote's capacity. So he wired White as follows: L. C. White, Amsten, Vt.:

"Can Ed Moote cut five cords of wood one day?—I have a proposition and am joined at it. Wire me once, if he can, make your telegram strong, but accurate, as we have to back this up."

White promptly replied: Maxwell Everts, New Willard, Washington, D. C.:

"Have contacted witnesses to prove that Moote chopped, split, but did not pile, five and one-half cords of wood in one day, twenty-one cords in five days. He offers to bet can repeat."

L. C. W.

When Everts got White's message he lost no time in accepting all the wagers offered, and it was not long before the aggregate amount was large enough to make a trip to Vermont worth while. The bet was run that "Moote must fell, cut, split and pile five cords of standing timber four foot wood between the hours of sunrise and sunset on Sept. 20." Stories of the novel contest had spread about the country, and hundreds of the surrounding towns came to see the trick turned.

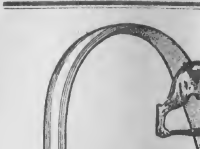

NATURE'S ESSENCE.

Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect. If we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest, there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the black-cherry tree, the root of saunders, stone root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal root, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this vegetable extract and alternative of the greatest efficiency. Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of FREDERICK ARTHUR and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is purified, invigorated—the vital force of the body brightens and their increased activity consumes the waste rubbish which has accumulated in the system.
